Description

The Cranchi 39 Endurance has the distinction of having been one of only a few Euro-cruisers of her era to be built on a high performance stepped hull. Aside from that, the other notable features of the 39 Endurance are her large cockpit, and the storage compartment under that aft sun pad designed to stow an inflatable tender. With so much of the Cranchi's length given over to the cockpit, it's not surprising that the interior is smaller than other express cruisers in her class. It's also unusually arranged—a di nette is forward rather than the traditional stateroom, and the only sleeping quarters are aft in the private midcabin. All of this adds up to a superb day boat—a design that will appeal to those placing more emphasis on fun in the sun than on extended cruising. High lights include an exceptional helm layout, anchor/windlass locker with fender storage, excellent handling, and a foredeck sun pad.
